NATION-WIDE SEARCH

FOR MISSING WIFE

---

A letter revealing the sorrowful story of a husband's nation-wide search for his missing wife has come to Chief Beavers from Russell, Iowa, to which W. W. Wolfe, a native of Montgomery went in the hope of finding the woman.

Mrs. Wolfe disappeared from Montgomery several months ago, the letter states. The husband, accompanied by their 4-year-old daughter, trailed her through several northern states, losing track of her in Iowa.

In Russell his funds were exhausted and he was forced to go to work. Following several weeks of residence in that city he learned through the newspapers of the case of an unknown woman who had been taken from a train in Atlanta and carried to a local hospital in an unconscious condition.

Wolfe investigated the case and learned that the woman filled the description of his missing wife. He communicated with the chief of police and was preparing to come at once to Atlanta when the woman left the hospital in which she had been confined and again had disappeared.

Mrs. Wolfe is a woman under 30 years. Her husband accounts for her actions by strange mental trouble which he says she is sometimes afflicted.

JIM CONLEY'S CASE WILL

COME UP AGAIN TODAY

---

It Is Improbable,
However,

That the Negro Will

---

Jim Conley's case will probably be called in Judge Ben Hill's criminal branch of the superior court today. However, from the best advices available late last night, the negro will again be sent back to the Tower to await the decision in the Frank case now before the supreme court and in which Conley is held as an accessory after the fact.

Judge Hill has outlined his stand in the Conley case to court attaches and he will undoubtedly again today place the case further along on the criminal docket, it is said, despite the pleas of both Solicitor General Dorsey and the negro's attorney, William Smith.

Attorney Smith arrived in Atlanta late last night from Macon, where he had been attending a trial. It is understood that despite Judge Hill's wishes in the matter Smith will make an impassioned address to the court this morning in an effort to have the court proceed with the Conley case and dispose of it one way or another.
